Theological Student Pays $50 Fine for Rum Running

Forced to Quit College Because of Money Shortage

A theological student who is planning to become a foreign missionary was fined $50 in federal court yesterday for smuggling liquor into the United States.

He is Floyd Mottoli, 26, of Seattle, Wash., who is studying at Andover Newton Theological School in Massachusetts.

He was sent to federal court yesterday after being arrested for smuggling liquor into the United States.

He was found in possession of liquor when he tried to enter the building. He was released on bail, but when he appeared in court, he was found guilty of smuggling liquor into the United States.

He was then ordered to pay a $50 fine and to submit to a search of his belongings.

He told the judge that he was not trying to smuggle liquor, but was trying to support himself.

The judge ruled that he was guilty of smuggling liquor and ordered him to pay the $50 fine.

With Ellen White as grandmother, “foreign mission service was ever kept before them as the most desirable life objective,” as one of their friends later remembered. And both brothers responded to calls to serve as missionaries in China. Henry in 1911, Herbert in 1913, bringing their young families along with them. Herbert managed the church publishing house and did other administrative work, while Henry worked in education. Both families returned home in 1919. Sadly, both brothers died young, Henry in 1954, and Herbert in 1962.

Henry White was a keen amateur movie-maker and photographer. He sold photographs commercially, and he is the filmmaker behind the 10mm footage you see here. He took many movies in China, both of the local people and of missionaries. The footage was donated to the Adventist Archives last year by Henry's daughter, Baphne O'Brien, and her daughter, Marilyn Cook, and was
